

Huey Long in Strategic Retreat, Awaiting Opportunity to Return

WASHINGTON—No one has sunk into greater eclipse lately than that ebullient, ranting, debonair individual, Huey P. Long.

After staggering, weakened and bleary, from the Senate floor after his futile filibuster, Huey has almost disappeared from the headlines which he so loves to adorn.

There are several reasons for this, some not so complimentary to the alleged Kingfish.

One is that Huey has not been as faithful a traveler on the water-wagon as during the heyday of his rampage last winter. When he is on it he can talk and walk rings around most of his Senatorial colleagues. When he is off, his effectiveness is nil.

Another reason is that Roosevelt, with his high tax program, stole Huey's best thunder.

Then there is the effect of certain rookie Senators who decided to call the Kingfish's bluff. They resorted to the simple expedient of sitting in the last row of the Senate and emitting Broo-beers.

Even for a man with Huey's hide, it was downright disheartening.

So the kingfish, who is as good a strategist as they make 'em, decided to fade out of the picture. He has done this before. His policy is that of any good general: When the battle is too hot, retreat, wait for the proper moment, then come back.

A lot of people, of course, claim Huey can't come back. But to one who came back after the Sands Point, L. I., washroom episode, no "come-back" is impossible.

Gold Diviner

La Luz Mining Company has just been restrained from selling its stock. In doing this the Securities-Exchange Commission staged an unusual demonstration.

The demonstration was to test the accuracy of a gold-divining instrument by which the company located its gold.

The La Luz Company claimed to have a vein of ore which would mine $30 a ton—exceptionally high content. In substantiation of this it cited the word of Professor Philip Haas of Los Angeles, described as a "scientist and geologist" with a world-wide reputation as inventor of the mineral indicator.

But the SEC was skeptical. It wanted to know how Professor Haas and his mineral indicator could locate gold. So it asked the Professor to come to Washington. There members of the Commission arranged a test.

Six large match boxes were arranged on the floor. One box contained a gold nugget worth about $200. Professor Haas was asked to locate the match box which held gold.

He applied himself with great earnestness. The mineral indicator was held in the right hand. It consisted chiefly of a weight suspended from a brass cylinder. If the weight swayed from side to side it denoted the presence of gold.

One by one, Professor Haas held the indicator over the boxes. Over the second box, the indicator swayed. "This box," he said, "contains gold."

Over the fifth box he hesitated, the instrument swayed almost imperceptibly. Finally Haas said: "This box also contains gold."

"Then the second and fifth boxes contain gold," summarized Andrew Jackson, attorney for the SEC.

Professor Haas hesitated, decided to test the fifth box over again. He repeated the test, declared that this box did not contain gold.

Then the boxes were opened. The second box contained a piece

SPECIAL MEET OF SOLONS TO BE SHORT ONE

Davey Wants a "Short and Snappy" Special Session Claim

MAY LAST WEEK

No Other Bills But Taxation to be Considered

COLUMBUS, O., July 17—Gov. Martin L. Davey and his legislative advisers intend to make the special session of the state legislature next September "short and snappy", it was disclosed today.

The governor has spread the word among his trusted legislative leaders that the special session is to end in one week after the general assembly reconvenes if possible and that it is not to be made another bill-introducing orgy.

The special session will be the last of his administration, his advisers let it be known, although there were a great many other members of the assembly today who were willing to gamble that the general assembly will be back in session many months before the end of 1936 to untangle difficult taxation, school and relief problems.

To Last Week

Davey, according to Representative Grover Traxler (D), of Wyandot county, one of his administration supporters in the house, intends to use his influence to see that the general assembly does not stay in session more than one week this fall.

"He does not expect to call another special session during the biennium," Traxler told members of the special joint legislative schools committee.

From J. Freer Bittinger, Ashland, speaker of the House of Representatives, came word that administration leaders hope to steer clear of a mass of new legislation at the special session, although there are a half dozen special committees busy drafting plans for additional legislation for the session.

Only Tax Bills

R. J. Kiefer (R), Logan county representative, cautioned members of the joint schools committee against preparing new legislation to attempt to solve the state's educational ills, pointing out that Bittinger had indicated it is the purpose of the special session to wrestle with taxation matters solely.

"As one of your friends in this county, I am anxious to know how much truth there is in the story. I do not wish to 'put you on the spot' in the matter, but I would appreciate some definite word from you as to whether or not you intend to run again.

"You may be assured that your friends in this county are much interested.

Cordially yours,
FRED C. CLARK."

Underwood's reply of July 15 follows: "Dear Friend: 'Your letter received and read with much interest. The statements mentioned in your letter are untrue and unfounded.

15 INJURED AS TRAIN HITS SMALL TRUCK

Upper Sandusky Scene of Crash of Pennsylvania Flyer Today

ENGINEER SERIOUS

Rails Torn Up for 600 Feet by Speeding Train

UPPER SANDUSKY, July 17—Fifteen persons were injured, three seriously, when the Pennsylvania railroad's Liberty Limited, westbound from Pittsburgh to Chicago, crashed into the trailer of a small truck at a downtown grade crossing here at 5:15 a. m. today.

The seriously injured: Engineer R. D. Todd, 47, Ft. Wayne, entire right side scalded, right arm broken, shoulder dislocated, deep cut back of right ear. Taken to Ft. Wayne.

Fireman J. W. Ritchie, Ft. Wayne, 48, face scalded, legs cut and bruised. Taken to Ft. Wayne.

Robert Williams, 25, Cambridge, O., driver of the truck. Ribs broken, cuts and bruises. Taken to Bucyrus, O., hospital.

12 Others Hurt

The twelve other injured persons were all passengers in the 10-coach crack train. None was seriously hurt and only a few required medical treatment. None went to a hospital.

Upper Sandusky is on the Main line of the Ft. Wayne division. There is a double track running through town. An eastbound passenger train had just cleared the crossing, when Williams put his truck in gear, unaware of the approach of the Liberty Limited.

Demolishing the trailer, the giant engine lunged from the rails, tearing them up for 600 feet as it went. The locomotive, after careening crazily, finally keeled over on its side right angles to what was left of the double track.

Tore Away Platform

In leaving the track, the locomotive became uncoupled from the string of coaches, which dashed on past it for a long distance, then tore off the platform from the Pennsylvania railroad freight depot, finally halted within 10 feet of the front porch of Virgil Fox, who with his family was asleep in the house.

The wreck tied up all traffic through here on the Ft. Wayne division. Railroad workers said the track probably will not be restored until late today. Meanwhile, trains were rerouted via Marion.

SHERIFF GETS LETTER SENT STEVE SURINA

"We'll Spring You or be There With You" Message Says to One

SIGNED "BOSS"

County Jail Watched Closely by Guards

A close watch was being maintained over the county jail today by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and deputies following receipt of a code message addressed to one of the four Allentown, Pa. youths captured here Sunday.

The message, addressed to Steve Surina, one of the confessed murderers, was mailed from Columbus at 8 p. m. Monday and said in part: "We will spring you or be in there with you."

Two state highway patrolmen and members of the sheriff's force took special precautions to guard the jail Tuesday afternoon and night.

The message read as follows: "Dear Steve: 'Don't worry old pal we will stand by you. I am sending you an attorney in a few days.

(Signed) Boss."

Written in code was this message:

"Keep your chin up and your clothes on. We will spring you or be in there with you."

The code consisted of the use of numbers, each number representing a letter in the alphabet, running from Z to A instead of the usual A to Z.

Surina Denies It

When Surina was shown the message, he said it was "just a prank." After an investigation, however, Sheriff Radcliff learned that the code was the same one used by Surina and his pals while they were serving terms in a Pennsylvania reformatory.

The sheriff also learned that the leader of the gang was a man named "Boss" and was called "Boss" for short. He is believed to be the writer of the message.

Sheriff Radcliff took the note serious enough to have the jail watched closely. It is under special guard today.

The sheriff has heard reports from several quarters that a strange youth has been in the city since Sunday night. He has appeared at several places and acted suspiciously. It is possible, the sheriff believes, that this person is a member of the gang.

Warrants Received

Warrants for the return of the four hoodlums were received by Sheriff Radcliff Tuesday. Nick Risko the self-styled leader of the quartet, is charged with murdering Joseph Rathburn, a night watchman in an Allentown junkyard on November 9, 1934. Surina has already confessed a part in the murder.

A warrant charging that all four of the youths, Surina, Risko, Frank Stavinsky, and Sveve Schutz stole a Chevrolet sedan valued at $700 from Allentown on June 28 was also received. Sheriff Radcliff intends to hold the quartet here until he receives word from Police Chief Fred Kuntz of Columbus that Detective George Rider, who was shot in the search Sunday, is on the way to recovery.

Asserting that economies of far-reaching nature could be obtained through better use of available floor space, the survey under the direction of Col. C. O. Sherrill urged a detailed study to make the large investment in floor space "yield a better return."

The report recommended that a number of glass partitions be removed in the interests of economy and further urged that "better grouping of various departments could be made to produce greater efficiency and better supervision."

Floor space and layout recommendations, the report said, can be carried out by executive action. The Sherrill group did not specify in its report how much money could be saved the state by better use of floor space, but it was estimated that total savings would run into the thousands yearly.

Oklahoma City, Okla., is the first city in the United States to charge its citizens a fee for parking on the streets. Parking meters like that shown here are being installed at 20-foot intervals throughout the downtown section. A nickel in the slot, allowing the motorist to park for the time specified on the meter, raises a red indicator which drops when the allotted time expires.

Uncle Shylock

The Home Owners Loan Corporation is now face to face with the question of whether the Government is going to play Uncle Shylock or Santa Claus.

It has quit making loans and has settled down exclusively to the job of getting its money back. It is merely a collecting agency.

This involves a most important policy—one which goes to the root of the New Deal. Millions of dollars have been lent by various New Deal agencies, and the general assumption by many people is that the Government never will try very hard to get its money back.

This was the case with the HOLC. Much of the money lent to home owners admittedly was a poor risk. The Government took up mortgages which private companies turned down. That was the chief reason for its creation.

As a result, the number of HOLC delinquents is piling up rapidly. At present twenty per cent of all HOLC borrowers are delinquent ninety days or more.

It is significant that the HOLC is using persistent—some people claim, hard-boiled—collection methods. With the exception of cases in genuine distress, officials are ringing doorbells daily and demanding cash.

The policy is to dispel the notion that Uncle Sam is a benign charity giver in the mortgage business. He is to be Uncle Shylock. It comes as if this is a definite standard for another New Deal money-lending agencies.

HE MADE AND LOST FORTUNES

ANDRE GUSTAVE CITROEN, French automobile manufacturer, was a member of that school of industrial geniuses who owe both success and failure to their daring. He was frankly a disciple of Henry Ford and copied both the producing and the marketing methods that brought such notable success to his American contemporary. And Citroen was successful, too. His industrial achievements were the wonder of Europe and his abilities were not confined alone to the swift production of good automobiles.

During the war, when the failure of the ammunition supply was responsible for serious military reverses for France, Citroen transformed his plants into munitions works and soon was turning out 55,000 shells a day. He lacked, however, what Ford possesses in great abundance—discretion and caution—and these defects proved to be the factors that contributed to ultimate failure, rather than success. Great adventures and fantastic enterprises lured him.

He financed two expeditions across the Sahara in Citroen cars. He envisioned vast hotels in the middle of the desert and an automobile route from Algiers to equatorial South Africa. At the Deauville Casino he was a familiar figure. Once he won 15,000,000 francs in a single week at baccarat. Another time he lost 13,000,000 francs at poker in a single night. When death came to him a few days ago all that he had gained through daring and energy and genius had been stripped him by adversity. But he had done much for his country and had lived an exciting life.

THE LASH

BRUTAL and a relic of coarser days perhaps, the whipping post still commands whole-hearted respect from malefactors. Bearing this out is the instance of a man in Alexandria, Virginia, convicted of flogging a child, who preferred a year in jail to a taste of the same punishment.

Physical pain is something that impresses even the dullest. Crooks of a certain class know nothing of the finer points of penology, nor do they appreciate society's sincere endeavors to reform them. Instead of recognizing a parole as an opportunity to go straight, they are liable to glory in their astuteness in having political friends to do smart wire-pulling in their behalf. But the lash descending on the bare hide sings a song they can understand.

The whip makes no appeal to hidden virtues, it exerts no kindly suasion to repentance, but it is a sure and effective means of implanting the fear of law in hearts of the yellow rats who prey so impudently upon their brethren. It is retribution, and retribution hurts.

BRITISH HUMOR

LONDON PUNCH has always found America and Americans unfailing sources of humor. Our manners and customs have provided material for many a merry squib. Punch's writers and caricaturists have found it necessary merely to give the American scene a casual survey and the material for uproarious laughter, or at least for subdued mirth, was immediately available.

One of Punch's writers, a shrewd chap who knows us inside and out to whom all of our weaknesses and foibles are as an opera book, has just written a piece on Americans and their ways. "I like a grateful nature as well as anybody," he says. "Moreover, nobody knows better than I do what the Americans have done for this country—crooners, jazz and the English language what it is today. O. K. by me, boy."

This is a severe indictment and we stand convicted. But it is incomplete. There is no mention of a foolish loan of five billion dollars which the United States made to England when all seemed lost, and there is no word of a couple of million Americans sent to France when England's back, on no less an authority than the head of her armies, was to the wall and when every inch of ground gained in four years of fighting had been lost.

These circumstances assume aspects of humor only when considered in connection with the fact that England, when we sought to collect an honest debt, told us to go jump in the creek. Does not the writer for Punch recognize its possibilities for a rib-splitting column or two?

Fable: Once a perfectly grand boy asked a girl for a date and she turned him down because she already had a date with a pill.

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE

BELLE BURNS GROMER

CHAPTER 56

WORSE THINGS than a wounded ego could happen to a woman—and to a man. Within himself Val must find the strength for both of them. He crossed to his wife and took hold of her limp hands. "You must trust me, Lia," he said earnestly. "I'll take care of you from now on. I promise. You need never fear that anyone will laugh at you. But we aren't going to run away. Right here we stay. With our heads held high, see?" His mouth was grim when he forced himself to say, "Why, this is no great tragedy—that's what I happened to. We have something really lasting and fine ahead if we fight to make it so. But I'm not getting out of the navy. And I'm not selling my invention. Hereafter, I do not run away from anybody nor anything! Do you understand?"

She stared up at him, her face expressionless. "You—won't change your mind?"

Her fringed lids lowered abruptly. "Very well," she said. "I'll rest now as you wished. Perhaps I shall even sleep if I am not disturbed."

It hurt like the devil to hear that hopeless note in her voice. He watched the small doll-like figure in its gaudy crimson robe go dejectedly back into the shadows of the room beyond. The door swung to behind her.

He went back to the desk with a new determination in his movements. The envelop lay in the circle of light. No need for further delay in placing these plans where they belonged. He leaned forward and scrawled Captain Edding's name across the packet in bold letters. After that he picked it up and went out the door and along the hallway. As he passed he could hear Stephen Garene moving nervously about in the living room.

Garene must wait a little longer to tell his story, Val thought. He emerged from the bungalow and heard "four bells" striking in different tones from the various ships in the yard. Six o'clock, and already almost dark. He peered up to where black clouds scudded across ominously darkening skies. A hot wind, acid with forest fire smoke had sprung up from the southeast. A storm was on its way.

He crossed to the office and was glad to see that Dyer was still there. Without more ado he gave the manila envelope into the man's broad hands. Then he stood with a great feeling of relief to watch the awkward figure with its sea-going gait roll off in the direction of Captain Edding's quarters.

Val returned to the house and paused in the kitchen to tell the slayed Opal she was to leave for the night. Mrs. Preston was not well, he informed her, and wanted no dinner. He would prepare something for both of them when they wished it. Understand, at once! He did not avoid her curious, knowing stare but rather returned it until she hastily lowered her pale eyes. He waited until she had donned hat and coat and reluctantly closed the outer door behind herself. Then he went on through the hall to the living room where Stephen Garene waited.

"Now then, sir, I am ready for your explanation," Val said from the doorway.

The tall, lean figure standing before the fireplace swung about to face him. "Certainly, Preston, one is due you," Garene admitted with a shake of his head.

As the older man spoke Val had started across the floor only to be stopped by a noise that seemed to come from the bedroom. He flung up a swift hand for silence. "Did you hear that?" he asked Garene sharply and made for the closed door.

"For God's sake let the girl stay where she is!" Garene cried. "It was only the wind you heard. Don't arouse her again, beg of you. I've had about all I can stand of this."

Val leaned his ear against the panel but heard no further sound. Lia's strength had been heavily taxed and perhaps it was well not to disturb her. But even as he turned away he was goaded by a sense of something amiss, an urge to go back and enter the room. Garene's harsh voice diverted him, however. "Believe me, my boy," Garene said, his dark, hawk-like face intense with feeling, "it was never my intention that such an injustice should be perpetrated on an unsuspecting man." He began to pace the floor, his hands clasped behind him, head bent. "As soon as the news of the ill-starred marriage reached me I made plans to come here with all speed. I wanted to set things right," he waved an arm in a gesture of bewilderment, "but how, was beyond me—"

"When I arrived in Bremerton," he went on, "I saw that you were kind to Lia, that you seemed genuinely fond of her. After that, I was in a quandary to know what course to pursue. Then today, she—she drove me too far. And I blurted out the thing I have always been selfishly, perhaps—kept from her."

"Pretty late in the day to strike at her like that!" Val commented savagely. Garene's face contorted, he pressed a hand against his forehead as if trying to collect his thoughts. "How can I explain? How can I make you understand my side of all this? The fault, of course, is at my door. But it didn't occur to me the girl could grow up so quickly. She was a child the last time I saw her; a school girl. My sister warned me, I must admit, but I laughed at her. Even when she told me that the girl attracted men and that a suitable marriage must be arranged before it was too late, I thought it was only Julia Lee's desire to be free of a garden she had always resented. Besides, I was busily engaged in organizing my latest expedition at that time. And so I did nothing."

He went on pacing nervously up and down as he talked. "My sister, Julia Lee, is a dyed-in-the-wool southerner, intensely proud of the Garene name. Last autumn, when the son of one of her old friends fell in love with my daughter, she bundled the girl up and brought her to China in the hope that I would be returning from the desert and would relieve her of further responsibility. And then, in Peiping, when she learned that I had delayed my coming, she also received word of Lia's proposed marriage to you and was unsuspecting still."

"The knowledge that you were a naval officer, one of an old Virginian family, had the poor woman beside herself with anxiety. Months later, Karsten—one of my men who was in Peiping at the time—brought me her letters containing a full account of the whole affair. In a panic, she tried to reach Shanghai in time to stop your wedding and, if necessary, to acquaint you with the facts of the case. But as you know, the reds seized the railway and she was turned back to Peiping. You can imagine her dilemma. I am a figure of more or less news value, so a navy man; and so she could not explain matters by public wire without causing a scandal. Then came a telegram saying you were being married at once. And, consciousness-stricken, Julia Lee simply turned tail and ran."

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND

Pie Plant Pete, the personality boy who will appear in person on the stage of the Grand Theatre tonight was discovered seven years ago by Glenn Rowell, who realized at once that he had the making of a national radio star. Glen arranged for Pete to broadcast over WLS at Chicago and took a personal interest in him and it wasn't long until Pie Plant Pete did become a national radio star and was heard over a coast to coast network of the National Broadcasting company. Pete did not stop at this but also decided to make personal appearances and get acquainted and see the people who were listening to him and let them get a look look at him. He met with immediate success in this venture and every theatre he played the crowds stood in line to see him.

After you see Pie Plant Pete in person and hear him sing those songs we are sure you will marvel at his voice and his ability of playing the guitar and harmonica, and after you see and hear him you will agree that Glen was more than right.

AT THE CIRCLE

Noel Madison, cast as Douglas Worthington, the affable but dangerous villain of "What Price Crime," the new Max Alexander melodrama, now showing at the Circle Theatre, shines as a perfect example of an unscrupulous daredevil who for a time successfully defies the best undercover men of the U. S. Department of Justice.

The role is ideal for a player of Madison's versatility whom the movie fan will remember for his many viril performances on the screen. Among recent picture in which this accomplished actor distinguished himself may be mentioned Warner's "Sinner's Holiday," Fox's "Humanity," and the Tower production, "The Important Witness." Other films in which he appeared include, "Hatch Man," "Play Girl," "Symphony of Six Million," "Trial of Vivienne Ware," "Hat Check Girl," "Last Mile" and "Destination Unknown."

AT THE CLIFTONA

Something in the nature of a revelation awaits you at the Cliftona Theatre where Paramount's "Four Hours to Kill" now occupies the screen. In the starring role is Richard Barthelmess, one of the most competent actors to survive the calamitous advent of the talkies, but such a Barthelmess as you have never seen before!

Cast as Tony Mako, the hard, cruel and ruthless desperado who steals time away from the noose to get the man who squealed on him, Barthelmess renders a screen portrait that is a breath-taking contrast to his usual suave and amiable performances. It is the most powerful and emotionally dramatic role the screen has ever granted him, and Barthelmess plays it with such insight that you wonder why his chance was so long in giving him his chance. Adapted from the hit play, "Small Miracle," "Four Hours to Kill" is a fascinating cross-section of the melodrama that occurs in a New York theatre, where a criminal lurks in hiding for his victim.

SHREWD REASONING

EVERY EXPERT has the rare faculty of mentally visualizing holdings about the card table. Lacking this faculty a player may be classed as "good," but he never belongs in the class of "experts." The following hand illustrates the great utility of this faculty. The hero of the occasion was my partner, Howard Cornwell, who sat South.

Bidding went: West, 1-Club; North, 2-Hearts, to show game prospects; East, 2-Spades, rather than at once supporting partner; West, 3-Clubs, to show both length and strength; North, 3-Hearts; East, 4-Clubs; West, 4-Spades; North, 5-Diamonds, causing East to pass. Cornwell studied the bidding. Evidently I held 6 good hearts. West

ON THE SPOT

Carbon Dioxide Used As Relief for Asthma

By LOGAN CLENDENING

IN VISITING the hospital during the last two weeks, I was impressed with the treatment of fever and similar conditions of the nose by carbon dioxide.

This is a new treatment and appears to afford symptomatic relief. At Guy's hospital, where I saw the demonstration, the physician himself is a sufferer from asthma and perennial hay fever. A few years ago he visited a French health resort, Mont Dore, known as the "province of the asthmatics."

For these patients, the treatment recommended at the resort is walking around a room filled with the vapor of Mont Dore water at a temperature of 90 degrees F. The vapor is supposed to be "sedative, decongestive and anti-spasmodic" to the bronchi, and it gave my colleague some relief.

But he obtained much more relief from another treatment, which consisted of a nasal douche with the Mont Dore water. This consists, so he says, of 99 per cent carbon dioxide.

Slight Tingling Produced

It produces a slight tingling sensation in the nose, and occasionally a burning feeling at the top of the head—probably when some of the gas enters the sinus. The doctor has been suffering for an attack of vaso-motor rhinitis, and almost always had a runny nose with violent paroxysms of sneezing. On his return to London he resolved to try to continue the treatment by artificially prepared carbon dioxide. Anesthetists frequently use carbon dioxide, mixed with their other gases, to regulate the breathing of their patients. The gas is kept in a small metal cylinder, a hose being connected to the cylinder by a small rubber tube is all the apparatus required.

The patient breathes through his mouth, and a moderately rapid stream of gas is allowed to flow into the nose without being actually inhaled. In hay fever and that constant runny condition of the nose, called chronic vaso-motor rhinitis, the treatment should be given for five to ten minutes up each nostril, morning and evening. Doubling the nose with ordinary charged water should have the same effect.

The effect seems to be a direct one on the mucous membrane of the nose. In asthma, if taken early in an attack, it may prevent the development of stertorous breathing.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clending can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are "Indigestion and Constipation," "Itching and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

ANNUAL RED BIRD SCHOOL AUGUST 1-10

Trautman Says Players 17 Years of Age or Over Eligible to Attend.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 17—The annual Columbus Red Bird baseball school will be held this year at the Red Bird Stadium from August 1 to August 10, President George M. Trautman has announced. The school is open to players 17 years of age or over who are seeking a chance to break into professional ball.

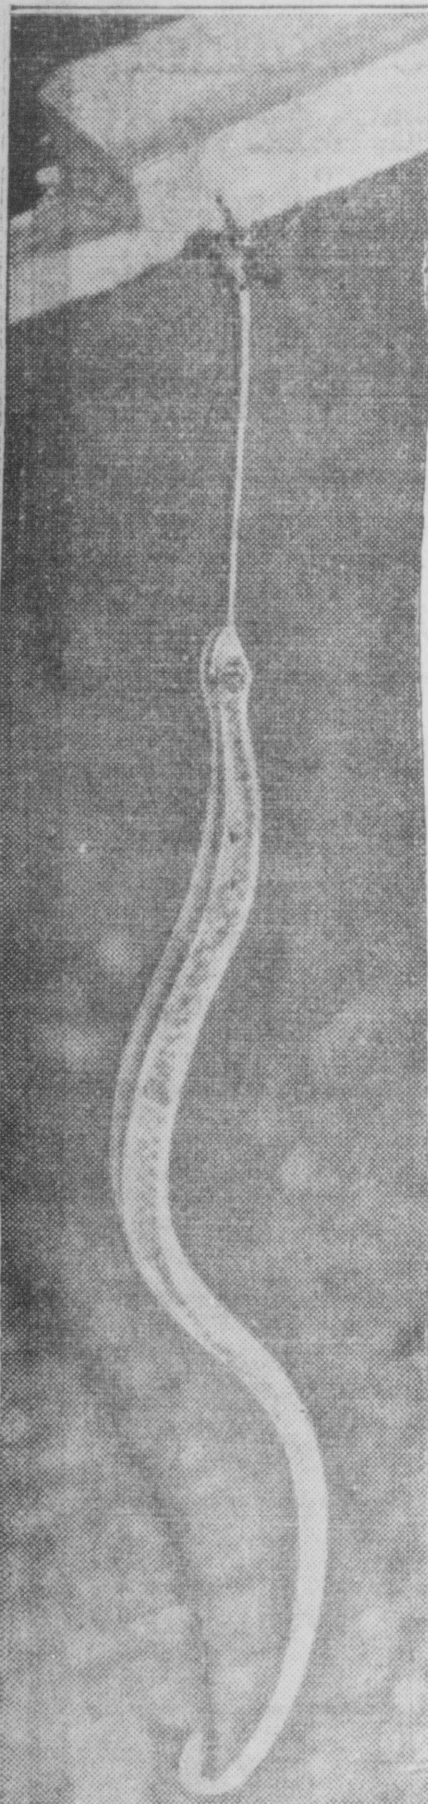

Each year, hundreds of youngsters who believe in their skill try out at the Red Bird school and the other schools operated by the St. Louis Cardinal organization over the country. The entire Cardinal scouting staff is on hand to supervise the operation of each school and each player is given ample opportunity to prove his worth.

Any player meeting the age requirement is requested by President Trautman to write or call at the Red Bird Stadium for an application blank. He must secure for his application, the endorsement of his coach or manager or some person in a position to judge his playing ability. Applicants that are accepted are to be notified by mail and will report August 1 at 9 a. m. for the ten-day school. Players offered contracts at the conclusion of the school are refunded their expenses.

About THIS and THAT By the Second Guesser

Really Loves Game

If everyone played golf and loved the game like Frank A. Marion, Jr., then Circleville would soon have golfers good enough to compete with any amateurs in the state — Marion is playing his first year at one of the finest outdoor sports in existence. He works for the gas company and has so much every day to do —

Works and Then Plays

His system is simple. He does his work, and then he hies himself to the golf course to get in his nine, 12 or 18 holes every day. Every day, mind you, not once a week but seven times a week. His work is even benefitted probably by his zeal for the golf game for he is just as enthusiastic over the links he gets in for George Foerster and company as he is over a 250-yard drive.

Marion Good Prospect

Right now Marion is the best member-prospect of the club has had in a long while. Johnny Mader is not shooting the kind of scores he did when he was caddy-ing and a member of the high school golf team — John Jenkins is playing the best game on the course but he is a caddy and not eligible to play as a club member. "I would be a good idea if some sportsmanlike member would buy him a junior membership — He could play the No. 1 spot on the club's team in its inter-club matches."

LOUIS IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, July 17—"Dead Pan" Joe Louis was in town today, "all set to go back to work." The expressionless Louis has been just riding along since he scored his sensational victory over Primo Carnera, but is anxious to get back into the training grind, he said in a seven-word monosyllabic statement, an oration for Joe.

Louis will train in the city for a few days, for his fight with King Levinsky at Comiskey Park Aug. 7, before moving to a permanent outdoor training camp.

CHAMP TO APPEAR

COLUMBUS, July 17—Miss Joyce Wethered, women's golfing champion of Great Britain and commonly termed as the best feminine golfer in history, will make an appearance here today over the Scioto Country Club course.

Miss Wethered will play in an exhibition mixed foursome with Mrs. Linton Fallis, Toledo champion, Charlie Lorms, and P. O. Hart, both professionals here.

SOLONS HEAR PROTESTS TO SALES TAXES

Hundreds of Letters Received Urging Substitute for Present Measure.

COLUMBUS, July 17.—Despite estimates that the state of Ohio will need between 30 or 40 million dollars in additional revenue next year, a movement to prevent re-enactment of the sales tax law is growing stronger daily.

Members of the joint legislative committee working on a taxation program to present to the special session of the General Assembly in the fall, are being flooded with letters urging that a substitute for the sales tax law be found.

The present sales levy expires Dec. 31, 1935. It is estimated that it will bring in approximately $50,000,000 in revenue to the state. Thus far, for 24 weeks, the sales tax has brought in over $22,500,000, not deducting the cost of administration. Carlton Dargusch, vice-chairman of the state tax commission, estimates that total yield will be $54,000,000.

No Substitute Proposed

No substitute proposal for such a large revenue yielding law has been proposed specifically, but the opposition to the sales tax is definite and growing. Observers are agreed that if the law is re-enacted, amendments to exempt food, clothing and building materials are almost certain.

If these amendments are adopted, it will mean a loss in revenue of approximately $10,000,000.

Marian Martin Sew Chart Complete, Diagrammed Included.

PATTERN 9302

Take a second look at this sketch for there's more to it than appears at first! A glance convinces one it's exactly the kind of frock Mother and Daughter approve of—but a second look proves that fetching little puffed sleeve can be omitted if it's a cool frock you're after. The fly-away ruffle encircling the shoulders is lovely if the dress is of crisp fabric like swiss or dimity. For a sturdy play dress, the small sketch illustrates tailored perfection achieved without the ruffle. This frock is all things to all girls—just choose the fabric and run it up in no time. Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart included.

Beauty Contests Are Considered "Out" By College Girls Who Oppose Them

Tide is Rising Against Choosing Mere Beauties In College Contests.

BRYN MAWR, Pa., July 18—The tide is rising against choosing "mere college beauties" in elections or contests. Thus young women of university and college are rising up to assert that "beauty contests" have no part in the life at institutions of higher learning.

But aren't there "beauty contests" any more?

I put the question to a Bryn Mawr student.

"Beauty contests?" Miss Bryn Mawr's freckled little nose wrinkled as she smiled. "Why, I don't know very much about them. We've never held any, I'm sure."

Brains a Coincidence

She looked thoughtfully at the toe of her white tennis shoe. "I don't believe that we've ever thought of beauty as a special distinction—I mean, as something to be considered by itself, apart from popularity or brains. It happens that some of the best looking girls in our class rate the most 'A's'. But it's just a coincidence."

"One thing I've noticed," chimed in a Wellesley junior, "is that Tree Day Mistress is often a girl who's well-liked rather than especially pretty. Choosing her is the nearest thing we have to a beauty contest."

"The same thing goes for the Tree Day aides, who are supposed to be the next most beautiful girls. They're apt to be popular girls with fair looks instead of genuine beauty."

A Co-ed's Reaction

Thinking that perhaps pulchritude wasn't valued at its true worth in the strictly feminine confines of Bryn Mawr and Wellesley, I next consulted a dark-haired, slender co-ed from Swarthmore. A likely entry, one might have thought, in almost any race for the golden apple.

"Do you hold beauty contests at Swarthmore?" I asked her.

"Oh, no." Her brown eyes reproached me. "We vote for a May Queen each year who is supposed to be beautiful—and sometimes is!—but this is the only thing of the sort we have."

"An incident in connection with our year book will show you what the sentiment is along this line. The editors decided to send the seniors' pictures to a movie star—Richard Arlen. I think—asking him to choose the most beautiful woman and the handsomest man in the class. And their pictures came out in the annual so labeled. Well, people just didn't like it—they thought it was cheap and that it lowered the tone of the whole book."

Clothes Important

"As a matter of fact, I believe that at Swarthmore we're more attracted by careful grooming and smart clothes than by real beauty."

As an authority on the subject, I next appealed to Miss Harriette Hatch who has been chosen one of the six beauties of Ohio Wesleyan for the past three years. Miss Hatch has the rare loveliness of the true blonde.

In her opinion, there's none of your "beautiful but dumb" stuff about an official college beauty.

Harriette Hatch, Ohio Wesleyan beauty, declares a girl must be intelligent to be beautiful.

"Nonsense!" she declares spiritedly. "Today, a girl must be intelligent to be beautiful. I have never known a legally elected college beauty who was unintelligent."

Other Qualifications

"Besides having her share of brains, a campus beauty must be well-known and well-liked. She must have taken a prominent part in the activities of the college. She must be genuinely friendly—this, especially. No snob was ever chosen as a college beauty."

"The point is that a college beauty must be elected! And to be elected, she must have, besides physical attractiveness, the qualities I've mentioned."

"The election is quite a serious business! In our college—and I understand that much the same plan is followed in other colleges and universities—each sorority submits one entrant. Their names—some 15 of them in our case—appear on a ballot. At the bottom of each ballot, are several blank spaces which may be filled in with other names. The entire student body then votes for 12 of these nominees.

No Beauty Parades

"Pictures are taken of the successful 12, and from our school these were sent this year to Mr. John LaGatta for final judgment. From them, he chose the six whom he considered the most beautiful."

"Every college man or woman knows how the beauties are selected and on what grounds. They know, too, that this is only one of many phases of college life, all of which receive their own recognition. There are probably a good many people, though, who seriously believe that choosing a college beauty involves a bathing suit parade across the campus; and if so, it's time they were set straight!"

"DODGE BLAZES ECONOMY TRAIL" says ROY CHAPMAN ANDREWS

"Sturdy, rugged Dodge helped me blaze a way through trackless wastelands in the Far East," writes Roy Chapman Andrews, famous explorer. "And now Dodge blazes a new trail—the economy trail. I know my new Dodge costs less to run than a small car."

Dodge owners everywhere are getting gas and oil mileage heretofore considered beyond reach. Many figure it costs less to own a Dodge than a small, competitive make. They say their gas and oil savings quickly make up the difference in price.

Drive a Dodge yourself. Make the FREE economy test. See how pleasant, comfortable it is to drive with its "Airslide Ride" and "Synchromatic Control." Dodge gives you the protection of all-steel bodies and genuine hydraulic brakes, yet costs only a few dollars more than the lowest-priced cars. List price now only $545 and up at factory, Detroit.

"DRIVING COSTS ARE DOWN
WITH X-70's NEW LONG MILEAGE"
... say motorists

"YES, THAT'S WHY OUR SALES
ARE WAY UP!" say Sohio Dealers

• The quickest measure of the sweeping wave of popularity for the new X-70 is found in the record-breaking sales increases reported by Sohio Dealers.

READ THESE EXTRACTS FROM TYPICAL FIELD REPORTS—sent in since the new X-70 was introduced:

"The first month that the New Triple Distilled X-70 was on sale, our business showed an increase of 31%..."
Cleveland Dealer

"... since the new Triple Distilled X-70 has been put on the market, sales have increased approximately 45%..."
Canton Dealer

"For the first fifteen days after your new Triple Distilled X-70 came on the market, I showed a 29.2% gain over my previous sales of X-70 gasoline. My customers say that X-70 is by far the best gasoline they have ever used..."
Youngstown Dealer

"... Since the Triple Distilled X-70 has been put on the market, our gallonage has increased 33%..."
Hardin County Dealer

"Thirty per cent increase in business..."
Zanesville Dealer

"Increased my business 25 per cent and my customers are enthusiastic over the new X-70... say it gives more pep and miles per gallon than any gasoline they have ever used..."
Toledo Dealer

"My business has increased 36 per cent and that is something to write about..."
Mansfield Dealer

"Since Standard Oil started to market the new Triple Distilled X-70, my business has increased 25 per cent..."
Cleveland Dealer

"My gallonage has increased 30 per cent and our satisfied customers are telling us of the wonderful performance and longer mileage of this new product..."
Barnesville Dealer

And so the reports go—from thousands of Sohio Dealers, comments too numerous to include here. Such popularity only comes where popularity is due. A gasoline capable of winning so many new converts all over the State deserves a trial in your car. Check your gasoline mileage with the new X-70—as so many others have—and you'll see why this new Triple Distilled X-70 is breaking all sales records!

Bring your car up to Standard!

JOBS COME FIRST

REVISING federal taxes so far as possible to be a stimulus to business sounds like a paradox. Of course every cent that goes in taxes is one more cent that will not buy goods, build factories or employ labor. Nevertheless, an effort should be made along this line.

When we talk about "the distribution of wealth" we must recognize the man on relief is not getting an effective share. He is getting merely subsistence and not an opportunity to show what he can do. When a man has a job, when there is enough volume of business in the country for a new man to start in and get a share of it with reasonable hope of success, when our young graduates can find their first positions, then sharing wealth is genuinely in progress.

Let us admit we have to have high taxes. If they will assure us of a stable dollar in the future by bringing into sight a balanced budget, there is one beginning toward better business. There are several other things that might be looked over.

The capital gains tax tends to freeze up property in the hands of the holder. It lessens opportunity by lessening the free market for properties.

It would be difficult, but desirable, in the case of corporations and business individuals to favor expenditures out of income made for improvements that will employ more labor.

A good debate on the floor of congress as to whether insurance should not be favored because of the stabilizing effect it has would be worth while.

If would not be altogether preposterous to allow rebates to corporations and individuals in some relative to the wages of those actually employed by them.

It will be promptly objected, of course, that each one of these lessens the government revenue. The answer is that the purpose is to put people to work. The more people there are at work, the less the government revenue for relief has to be, and the more government revenue there will be, because income taxes represent productively employed wealth and nothing else.

LET'S KEEP OUR HEADS

OPENING guns of the 1936 presidential campaign indicate that the battle going to be barbarously heavy with poison gas and stink bombs. Slander, abuse and the calling of bitter names are already in evidence as ammunition, with poisoning of the wells of public opinion—the trite phrase is justified—already begun.

The prospect is abhorrent, even if familiar. Certainly no other election in this century demanded judgment, reasoning, foresight, as does the impending one. In modern times only the elections of 1864 and 1896 suggest themselves as being more important to the nation's future than the election of 1936. Cool consideration of the issues should be the basis of each voter's decision, not vilification of men and organizations, dirty stories and malicious gossip, idiotic catch-phrases and demagogic slogans.

Nothing can avert a bitterly fought contest. The election will be a show-down between unyielding and, some believe, almost equally divided disciples of opposing political and governmental philosophies. The will to win is zealously manifested, but if it boils over into fanaticism on one or both sides the country all the adversaries love and hope in their way to serve will suffer cruelly.

IN THE FAMILY

IN ITALY where there is a dictatorship the edict has gone forth commanding bigger families and paying a bonus for them. In the United States, where the government still has its three branches and a constitution, the subterfuges sometimes are necessary, the administration may unconsciously be driving at the same objective but in a different manner.

Parents should begin thinking as they study that theoretical tax program where—by a 10-million-dollar estate dwindles to less than 4 millions, if inherited by one person. Money being what it is and probable taxes being less when estates are divided among several heirs, the only answer for the wealthy is bigger families. Instead of passing on one blue-blooded scion, we may expect the wealthy, if the suggested tax rates are adopted, to emulate the poor and rear families that would humiliate even great-grandfather.

Probably it will draw the stream of blue blood pretty thin, though at least it would keep the money in the family and thwart the share-the-wealth program. It would mean that the rich would have to choose between supporting large families and large hordes of papsuckers.

But how strange to see free people turn pale when the caller says he's a federal agent.

How times change. Once the persons who wished to hurt you used a club instead of a lawyer.

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

There were four fires in Pickaway-co in one day, with damage estimated at $25,000. The losses included the home and outbuildings of Mrs. Flora Bryant, one mile east of New Holland; a large round barn on the farm of Joe Hedges, five miles north of Amanda; a large barn on the farm of Mrs. Adam Rhil, near Meade; and a large stack of straw at the farm of C. E. Brown, near Atlanta.

Ward Robinson, of the Circle City Dairy, made an interesting address at the regular luncheon meeting of the Circleville Rotary Club.

Complimenting Mrs. Wid Gunning, of Hollywood, Calif., Mrs. Howard Moore was host to a number of guests at a luncheon at the Pickaway Country club.

15 YEARS AGO

Lightning struck a hackberry tree on the Crites farm, west of the river, killed one horse, stunned four others, and stunned William Davis, D. Hill and Weldon Martin. The men were plowing corn and sought refuge from a storm under the tree.

A brick house owned ad occupied by Amos E. Stout, two miles southeast of Stoutsville, was destroyed by fire with a loss of $5,000.

Charles Delaplaine Crawford, son of Mrs. Louise Crawford, N. Court-st., fell from a widow at the home of Germain Joseph and broke a bone in his right wrist.

25 YEARS AGO

Samuel W. Cartwright, who was elected grand patriarch of the I. O. O. F. at the state encampment, was installed into office at his home in this city by Judge E. E. Corn, of Ironton.

Hulse Hays had a narrow escape from serious injury when a wagon loaded with fat hogs which he was bringing to market upset near the river bridge and rolled down the levee.

C. E. Moeller and E. M. Stout took part in a midsummer clay bird tournament at the Columbus Gun club grounds. The former's score was 167 and the latter's score was 173 out of a possible 200.

STORMY LOVE

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE BY BELLE BURNS GROMER

CHAPTER 57

GARENNE fumbled for a cigarette and finally succeeded in lighting it. "I know I'm rambling, but hear me out," he told Val, running a nervous hand through the silver-frosted blackness of his hair. He stopped before the fireplace to stare into the empty grate. "It is enough to tell you that in the beginning of all this ugly mess I was proud and extremely ambitious. After college I had gone in for the diplomatic game, secured an appointment as under-secretary at the embassy in London and then began slowly to climb. Later, when I went out to Egypt, my chief interested me in this delving back into past civilizations and thereafter I looked upon anthropology as my avocation.

"When I was assigned to a post in China, I stopped for a visit at my old home in Charleston where I fell in love with and married Agatha Fitz-James." He paused to gaze straight before him, his thoughts far away. "She was like the carnations in the gardens on the Ashley," he said softly. "Her eyes were violet and there were faint blue veins at her throat and fragile wrists."

He roused himself to continue—"My post in Peking was attractive professionally, but the climate did not agree with my wife, who had never been strong. For a year she was a semi-invalid and finally she went to Japan to visit friends in the hope that the change might benefit her health."

He stopped to crush out his cigarette in a brass bowl. In the slight pause Val strained an uneasy ear toward the bedroom but all appeared quiet there. "Perhaps you will understand," Garenne continued, his eyes avoiding Val's, "that although I really loved my wife, a time came when I told myself that a man can not live on milk and water when his nature craves wild and strong meat. It was during Agatha's absence that I became infatuated with Lia's mother. Her father was a famous Chinese actor, a man whose interest in anthropology brought us together. He had a charming wife and their daughter, Al-Lee, was an exquisite creature, very like Lia. I can tell you it was a shock the night I arrived here and Al-Lee in her satin robe seemed to be standing there staring at me." He threw up his arms in a shrugging gesture. "In any case, Al-Lee became the wife and strong meat that I craved."

"When my wife returned from Japan, however, I experienced a revulsion of feeling. Perhaps I had wearied of yellow skin. And when orders to Paris came unexpectedly, I was very relieved. We left Peking rather hurriedly for Shanghai where we were catching a P. and O. for Europe, and so I did not see Al-Lee again.

"Despite persistent rumors of a war impending, my wife and I were delighted with Paris and were very happy. She had bloomed with renewed health. And then, on the very August day before the world went war-mad, I returned to our apartment to find my wife in her sitting room, staring like a dead woman at a tiny, crying thing with yellow skin and slant eyes." He paused, a shudder shaking him at the remembrance of those devastating hours. "An English nurse had brought the infant an hour earlier and explained carefully to my wife that the mother had died when it was born and the responsibility was now mine. So that there might be no mistake there was also a letter from Al-Lee's father. It was a very neat revenge."

He paced the room again. "War was declared a day later and almost at once Agatha offered her services to France as a nurse. I did all that I could to dissuade her but, from the child's arrival, her violet eyes for me were as blank as a doll's." He turned to Val, his face twisted. "I never saw her again, Preston," he said slowly. "She died a few months later in an isolation camp where she was assigned for duty."

"When she left me I didn't know which way to turn. There I was with that infant on my hands. You can't just walk off and abandon a baby, you know. I would have done it willingly had it been possible. My post in Paris was an excellent one. It was during Agatha's absence that I became infatuated with Lia's mother. Her father was a famous Chinese actor, a man whose interest in anthropology brought us together. He had a charming wife and their daughter, Al-Lee, was an exquisite creature, very like Lia. I can tell you it was a shock the night I arrived here and Al-Lee in her satin robe seemed to be standing there staring at me." He threw up his thought that the world should know a Garenne had so contaminated himself. Therefore she entered into this conspiracy with me to represent Lia as my legal offspring, and once she had accepted the child, I am afraid I should admit my responsibility to her shoulders. Whenever I considered telling the girl the truth, I remembered my position as a rising diplomat and took no chances that she might betray me. Even when, six years ago, I surrendered my career to lead my first expedition into the Gobi, I again put it off. The girl had lost her look of the Asiatic, and, as well as protecting myself, it seemed unnecessary to stamp her with a stigma that was not her fault."

He stopped suddenly before Val. "Well, there you have the story," he said. "As for the rest of it, if you wish to be free I'll do what I can for the girl." He paused frowning. "Although, with this economic depression in progress, and many of the backers of my expedition failing me, I am in a bad way financially."

Val hung up an impatient hand. "Lia will need nothing from you," he said shortly. "I am quite able to provide for my wife."

He could see Garenne's muscles relax with relief. "Very decent of you to take it like this," the man said. "Very decent. But I fear all this puts you in an embarrassing position. A naval officer."

"Our friends will not be influenced by Lia's unfortunate—parentage." Sick with disgust at the whole rotten mess, he stared at the selfish cause of it all. "The exaggerated race consciousness that is bred in us—in southerners, is not felt by everyone. In any event, Lia and I intend to hold our heads high and face this."

The older man had sunk down in a chair. Val glanced at his watch and saw that they had been more than a half-hour talking here. During that time he had repeatedly felt the urge to enter the next room. Now he determined to put it off no longer. He moved the knob slowly so as not to waken Lia should she be sleeping. When the door swung open noiselessly, he stepped forward on tiptoe and stood a moment in the darkness. There was no sound. Then as his eyes became accustomed to the gloom he uttered a sharp exclamation. He reached out a quick hand to snap on the light. The bed was empty. The room deserted. (TO BE CONTINUED)

THEATRES

AT THE CIRCLE

Evelyn Laye is one of the fortunate few who is equally at home on the stage and screen. She likes to go from one to the other, and finds that her experience in one medium has taught her something new which she uses to later advantage in the other.

In her latest vehicle, "Princess Charming," a musical romance produced by Gaumont British, now showing at the Circle Theatre, she has the almost unique experience of having created the title role for both stage and screen. In fact, it was her performance behind the foot-lights that won her the film part.

She created a Broadway sensation in the stage success "Bitter Sweet," and won picture acclaim more recently in "Evensong." In "Princess Charming" Miss Laye co-stars with that other screen and stage celebrity, Henry Wilcox, lauded for his performance as Marc Antony in "Cleopatra."

AT THE CLIFTONA

Something in the nature of a revelation awaits you at the Cliftona Theatre where Paramount's "Four Hours to Kill" now occupies the screen. In the starring role is Richard Barthelmess, one of the most competent actors to survive the calamitous advent of the talkies, but such a Barthelmess as you have never seen before!

Cast as Tony Mako, the hard, cruel and ruthless desperado who steals time away from the noose to get the man who squealed on him, Barthelmess renders a screen portrait that is a breathtaking contrast to his usual suave and amiable performances. It is the most powerful and emotionally dramatic role the screen has ever granted him, and Barthelmess plays it with such insight that you wonder why the screen was so long in giving him his chance.

Adapted from the hit play, "Small Miracle," "Four Hours to Kill" is a fascinating cross-section of the melodrama that occurs in a New York theatre, where a criminal lurks in hiding for his victim.

A PHILOSOPHER

To take things as they be—That's my philosophy. No use to holler, mope, or cuss—If they was changed they might be wuss.

If rain is pourin' down, An' lightning's buzzin' round, I ain't a-fearin' we'll be hit, But grin that I ain't out in it.

If I got deep in debt—It hasn't happened yet—And owed a man two dollars, Gee!

Why, I'd be glad it wasn't three! I never seen a night So dark there wasn't light Somewhere about if I took care To strike a match and find out where,

Sneeze Protective Action To Clear Nose of Particles

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

HAVE YOU a sneeze in your home at this season of the year? Or perhaps you have a personal sneezer. Perhaps you are a perennial sneezer. It is a nice point which suffers the most—the sneezer or the family. The sneezer seems to get some personal satisfaction out of it, even if theoretically he is the sufferer, but the family or office associates simply have to listen to the noise without gaining any physical relief from them.

Especially is this true of the morning sneezer who greets the sun with a matins of about nineteen assorted sneezes—ranging from the mild, apologetic, abortive little sneeze, up to the fortissimo blast that sounds as if it could clear out the Suez canal.

Before classifying sneezes, it may be valuable to inquire into the elemental nature of a sneeze. Because sneezing illustrates very well the difficulty of making a distinction between disease and health. Is a sneeze an indication of the one or the other? Well, obviously a person who is in the very act of sneezing could not be classified as being an example of perfect good health. He may, indeed, be on the verge of becoming a pathologic specimen. But on the contrary, the sneeze may be the means by which he attains health. The sneeze is a protective device. Its object is to clear the nose of particles, either bacterial or irritating, which might set up inflammation.

Sneeze May Prevent Disease
If a sneeze is a successful sneeze, it prevents disease. If unsuccessful, it may be only an indication of further trouble.

A sneeze is a reflex of the facial and respiratory muscles, the reflex set off by the sensory irritation of the mucous membrane of the nose.

For most people this irritation is in the form of germs—the germs, whatever they are, which cause the common cold.

There are such things as summer colds, but most of the nasal irritations of summer are manifestations of some kind of plant pollen irritation—hay fever. In the earlier spring months, the pollen from the trees are largely responsible. In June and early July, it is the pollen from the grasses. This cornyza used to be called "rose fever". Naturally, when the roses are the most conspicuous plants on the landscape, they get blamed for the running eyes and noses which accompany their appearance. But it so happens that their flowering parallels the flowering of the grasses—blue grass, timothy and orchard grass—and the grass pollens are light and carried by the breeze so that the eye is full of them.

You are not able to see the pollen grains except when a beam of sunlight illuminates a section of your room. Then you see there are myriad grains of dust in an apparently clean room. Many of those particles, this time of year, are grains of grass pollen. And every square inch of the atmosphere is equally laden with them. No wonder the unfortunate who is sensitive to them has hay fever.

There is also a type of cornyza which is perennial—all the year round. These people seem forever on the verge of catching cold but never do. Perhaps their morning sneezing prevents anything further. They have, however, a nearly constant watery secretion from the nose. They are also hypersensitive—perhaps to dust, to animal dander (which also gets in the air) or to foods.

GAME HANDS PASSED OUT

THE GREAT danger in making opening bids either third or fourth hand is that opponents may have passed holdings which may go game, just as was the case with the deal shown. On the other hand bidders should avoid passing out holdings capable of going game, making part from strongly bidding opponents. Individual thought, as well as the best general rules of procedure, should govern bidding or passing out holdings.

The best general rules for making opening bids either third or fourth hand are: Open on two and one-half quick tricks, if strong in both major suits; open upon three quick tricks if strong in only one major suit; open upon three and one-half quick tricks if weak in both major suits. Unless partner is trickless the foregoing strength should prevent an opposing secondary bid from going game.

South, West and North passed showing their single powerful suits, as they should have done. East also passed as fourth hand, on the ground that he did not have three and one-half quick tricks. Unless things were going badly for me I would have made an opening bid of 1-Heart, although only two quick tricks are held. The powerful spade and diamond suits would have decided me to bid. West hardly could be trickless, without a bid from either opponent.

Had East opened the auction with 1-Heart, South's best plan would have been an overall of 4-Spades, hoping to shut-out West, but the latter certainly would have bid 5-Hearts, possibly 6-Hearts, which East readily could have made.

Had East made an opening bid of 1-Heart, any attempt to overcall his legitimate small slam contract would have been properly punished, whether South bid spades or North bid clubs. Quite probably there would have been lively bidding of both black suits by opponents. Of course an opening bid by East might not have resulted so happily, but any small score, whether part game or penalty of opposing overcalls would have been better than a blank for passing out his hand.

FARM BUREAU OPPOSES ANY AAA CHANGES

Perry Green, President, Points Out Necessity of Continuing Present Measure.

"The Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry has struck several economically necessary provisions from the amendments to the AAA, and members of the Ohio Farm Bureau are urged by their state officials to use their influence to have included in the amendments those sections which are deemed worthy by the farm leaders of the country," said Perry L. Green, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, in the comment he made at Columbus today, pointing out the necessity of including the rubbed-out sections.

"This request results from the controversial nature of the changes made in the amendments by the Senate Committee, as it passed a vote of commendation on the amending sections recently," said Green.

The important provision to permit and authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to impose tariffs on competitive imported commodities, was stricken by the Senate Committee. It is the opinion of the farm bureau, according to Green, that this section should be reinstated with the proviso that the Secretary's power to increase or decrease tariff rates be limited to 50 per cent, thus overcoming a possible constitutional question.

Plan Explained
The deleted debenture plan of segregating 30 per cent of the customs duties for use in exporting farm crops and otherwise, should also be reinstated," asserted Green, "provided that not more than 25 per cent of the total funds shall be available for any one crop during any one marketing year."

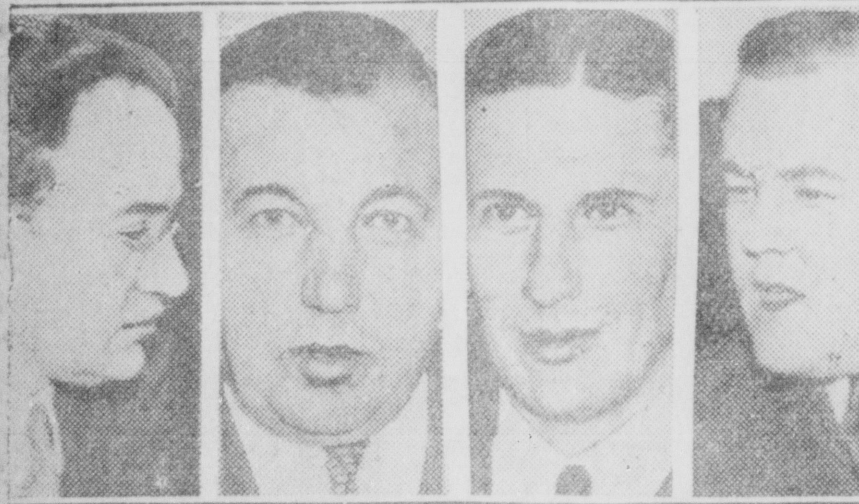

"The Senate Committee did not reinstate 'vegetables for canning' to be subject to marketing agreements and licensing. The farm bureau maintains that all non-basement crops and their products be included in the measure," said Green. "We are, however, glad to note that soy beans, wool, and mohair are added to the list by the Committee, and that all fruits, excepting apples, are included."

"The Senate measure also includes plans of control and provision for processing taxes on barley, rye, and flaxseed, three commodities upon which the AAA has not yet acted, but which, in the last year seriously needed beneficial treatment."

He Went Fast—Asleep

GENEVA.—A man here really went fast asleep. He got into a car parked on a steep hill and fell to sleep. In his sleep he let off the brake and the car started down hill. Gathering speed, it headed for the busy streets at the center of the town—with police in hot pursuit. Within a few yards of the stream of traffic at the bottom of the hill, a policeman managed to scramble on to the running board and stop it. The man was still asleep.

AUTOMATIC SHOCKER ELIMINATES HARVEST HANDS

For 12 years Peter Ketselson of Wichita, Kas., has experimented with an automatic shocker and now he has pronounced it perfect. Pictured on the 280-acre wheat field of Will Schweiter near Wichita, the automatic shocker does away with the harvest hands who normally would be required to shock bundles of wheat tossed to the side by the binder. The shocker retrieves the bundles as they come from the binder, placing them upright in a cylinder. When the conical-shaped cylinder is filled, the bundles are released and set on the ground in full shock.

Fruit Growers Attention!

The United States Department of Agriculture, through the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, is preparing a project for the National Emergency Council, which provides Relief Labor for grubbing out and removing neglected and abandoned orchards and vineyards. The project is being set up by states, in cooperation with the police powers of the various states, which in Ohio is vested with the Ohio Department of Agriculture. The Relief Administration will supply the men if and when the project is approved, taking labor from the relief load of cooperating counties. Quick action is now needed to determine county interests and needs in this project which, from present information, must be terminated June 30, 1936. The Extension Service is asked to measure county interest and needs.

This is a splendid opportunity for Ohio to cooperate in removing neglected fruit trees and vines, now breeding places for pests, such as scale, codling moth, apple maggot, blight, etc. Such neglected fruit plantings are usually unprofitable to their owners and an expensive encumbrance. This is the kind of an adjustment program the fruit industry has long needed, especially the apple industry, where often 40 per cent or more of the total apple crop has come from many neglected plantings. Commercial growers suffer serious competition from the low grade fruits, produced by neglected plantings, in favorable fruit years.

Further information about the project may be obtained at the farm bureau.

FATHER AVENGES GIRL

EPSOM, England.—How a young man was "mercilessly thrashed" with a hunting crop for a quarter of an hour by the father of a girl on whom he had sought to force his attentions, was described in police court here. Magistrates supplemented this punishment by sending the man, William James Chouls, to prison for four months with hard labor. Chouls pleaded guilty.

What's Doing in 4-H Club Circles

HEALTHIEST 4-H MEMBER TO BE FOUND

F. K. Blair Announces Plans For a County Contest To Be Held August 15.

The healthiest 4-H club member in Pickaway-co will have a chance to go to the Ohio State Fair and compete for the state honor, F. K. Blair, agricultural agent says in announcing plans to conduct a health contest among Pickaway-co 4-H club members.

The object of the contest is to promote interest in health and healthful living, Mr. Blair says. Each club in the county will nominate an entrant for the county contest which will be held at the farm bureau office on August 15.

Pickaway-co will also send a demonstration team to the state fair, Mr. Blair says. A county demonstration contest in which clubs will show what projects they're completing, will be held at the farm bureau office on August 15.

Mr. Blair says that any one interested in further details concerning either of the contest may secure them from him at the farm bureau office.

The 4-H Garden club of Jackson-twp visited members' gardens July 11. We met at the home of Virginia Hulise and inspected her garden first from where we traveled to the homes of Jean Goodman, Josephine Wolfe, Naomi and Hobart Hulise, Louise Fischer, Billy and Dorothy Mayberry.

From the Mayberry home we visited Sterley Croman's flower garden on the Lancaster-pk, which was well worth our time and trip. We came back to Jackson-twp to our leader's home, Mary Shortridge, and viewed her garden and from there we went to John Albert's garden and Kenneth Keller's home returning to Miss Shortridge's home where swimming and a picnic supper were enjoyed.

After the supper we had a business meeting. Ten members answered the roll call by naming a flower blooming in their own garden. John Albert's name was added to the roll as a new member.

Our next meeting will be held Aug. 15 at the school at 2 p. m.

One hundred and fifty 4-H club members in Pickaway-co have expressed their willingness to attend the 4-H club camp near Clifton Springs from August 5-12. Miss Mary Shortridge, county 4-H club leader says.

Cards were mailed to members throughout the county asking them if they would be interested in going to camp.

The large number who returned cards showing an eagerness to go surprised Miss Shortridge and F. K. Blair, county agent.

4-H GROUPS INTERESTED IN HOUSING

Clubs Throughout Country Co-operating With Federal Housing Administration.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Four-H clubs throughout the country, are co-operating in presenting the Federal Housing Administration program to rural residents.

Each club is appointing a housing representative or a committee, and more than 100,000 pamphlets suggesting work which may be accomplished by the members have been distributed among extension workers and local leaders. The local leaders familiarize themselves with the Housing program in order that they may present it intelligently to club members and residents of the community.

Suggestions for 4-H clubs made in the pamphlet distributed by the Federal Housing Administration include the planning of dairy barns, milk houses, hen houses and fences and judging of various farm houses by club members.

Coincident with the 4-H club program, farm representatives of the Federal Housing Administration are contacting officials of county fairs to arrange for space for housing demonstrations on their programs. More than 1,000 such fairs are to be held throughout the United States during the months of July, August and September. In some instances, 4-H club members will assist in staffing these booths.

In communities where fairs are not being held, farm bureau picnics and field days are planned, as well as tours when farmers visit neighbors in a group and inspect various crops. The farm representatives also plan to present housing programs on these occasions.

The Washington-twp Jolly Stitches 4-H Clothing club met at the Pickaway County Children's Home July 9 at 1:30 p. m. The meeting was called to order by the president, Margaret List.

We were glad to have five visitors, Pauline Hanley, Mrs. W. G. Richards and daughter, Fairy, Mrs. Goodchild, Miss Hattie Kerns and all our members present. We are sorry to have lost one of our members, Fayette Sayre.

Our recreation leader, Mary Kathryn Bowman, took charge of the meeting. After several games were played refreshments were served by Mrs. Goodchild.

The meeting of the Magic Sewing club July 3 was called to order by the president, Adelia Harley. The session was held at the home of the advisor.

Six members out of nine responded to the roll call by naming the difficulties they encountered in using the sewing machine.

Minutes were read by the secretary. Plans were made for the Fourth of July parade. The constitution and by-laws were read by the advisor and changes were made. Members then worked on their articles.

A demonstration was given by Marjorie Miller "How to Make a Basting Stitch."

Refreshments were served during the afternoon. The club adjourned to meet July 17 at 1:30 p. m. at the home of Dorothy Miller.

10 GROWING HYBRID CORN

Farmers Co-operating With Department of Agriculture In Corn Experiment.

Ten Pickaway-co farmers are cooperating with the Department of Agriculture and the College of Agriculture at Ohio State University in experimenting with hybrid corn, F. K. Blair, county agriculture agent, says.

Hybrid corn is a cross between two varieties and usually yields much higher averages than the ordinary variety according to Mr. Blair.

In Ohio at the present time there are more than 600 demonstration comparisons being made with hybrid corn. The following Pickaway-co farmers have demonstration lots sown:

Willard C. Betz, E. A. Ballou and F. T. Bowne of Harrison-twp; John H. Dunlap, Jr., Deer creek-twp; Renick W. Dunlap, Pickaway-twp; Harry W. Heffner, Washington-twp; J. Wright Noecker, Madison-twp, and Edward Schleich, and Dudley Briggs of Perry-twp.

Agriculture School Study Told by Boy

(This is the first of a series of articles on Vocational Agriculture written by students of this subject in the county. The author of this article is Robert Bausum.)

Vocational Agriculture, as taught in our high schools can have a very important place in the proper guidance in the lives of our farm boys. We have in the state of Ohio over 225 Vocational Agriculture departments, of which Pickaway County has three, located at Pickaway, Jackson and Walnut-twp high schools with a total of 85 boys enrolled.

Boys taking these courses do not stop their studies in the classroom, but continue them while conducting their different projects throughout the year. The motto of these boys is, "We learn by doing." There are many different kinds of projects carried by these boys. Some of them pertain to livestock and others to crop farming. These projects are large enough that the boys realize that they have a responsibility in managing, work and financing. These projects encourage the use of purebred livestock and high quality seeds. Most boys try to use improved practices which result in larger yields and a much higher quality product. These projects would be of no value unless we have available records of the activities, so each boy keeps a record of all costs and activities of one or more projects. After the completion of the project each boy summarizes his record or records and then analyzes the record to determine where he has made mistakes.

Field trips constitute another activity of the Agriculture boys. On these field trips they can observe how people have been successful in different phases of farming. The boys also visit different types of industry, thus giving them a broader knowledge of how the industrial world carries on its activities. These boys may also engage in state judging contests of which these are eleven.

The Future Farmers of America which is a national organization affords a great opportunity for work in parliamentary procedure and other organization work in agriculture. A good percentage of these boys enrolled in Vocational Agriculture in Pickaway-co are planning on having exhibits at the annual Pumpkin Show, under the direction of the Pickaway-co Junior Fair Board.

Crop Men Overcome Effects of the Drouth

Effects of the 1934 drouth on crops are gradually fading, and although prospects are uneven in the various sections of the country, crop yields may be expected to be about average on an acreage that is well above the average acreage of July 1 a year ago.

This in an interpretation of the federal crop report as seen by Floyd DeLashmott of the department of rural economics of the Ohio State university.

In the northern states of the drouth area, he says, farmers have overcome the handicaps of shortages of seeds, working capital and work horses reasonably well. By working long hours they have succeeded in planting larger acreages of spring wheat, barley and flax than seemed possible three months ago.

Licking-Co Plans Rural Festival

Alexandria, a community in Licking-co, is planning a "Rural Dramatics Festival" for August 31 to September 2. The festival is believed unique in that it is the first time an Ohio rural community has attempted through plays and pagentry to demonstrate the application of drama to rural neighborhood life.

About 10 plays, both one-act and three-act will be presented during the festival by neighboring groups. A Gilbert and Sullivan light opera and plays typifying rural activities such as the work of the grange, 4-H clubs and others are to be included among the entertainments.

In connection there will be parades and pagentry—even a rural puppet show—combined with a big community fair, games and contests.

About 100 people will take part. No person other than committee members will participate in more than one event.

One of the plays later will be presented before the American Country Life Association, which meets at the Ohio State University at Columbus, September 19 to 22.

Questions and Answers

My angel food cakes which I make very conscientiously come out of the tin as light as feathers but porous and full of holes. Can you tell me why they turn out this way and what I can do to prevent it?

The usual reasons why big holes are formed in baking angel food cakes are the use of too much sugar, too hot an oven which causes coarse air cells, and insufficient blending of the flour and egg whites which also produces coarseness.

Is it possible to make a mayonnaise salad dressing with hard boiled eggs?

If you cook the egg yolks to a floury condition and then rub them to a paste, adding all the other condiments, oil, vinegar, salt, pepper, etc., that the usual recipe demands, you may use hard cooked yolks instead of the uncooked kind with this advantage—that the dressing will not be so likely to curdle. Where the recipe calls for the yolks of raw eggs you may use half raw and half cooked, mixing the cooked yolks first, adding the raw next as you would oil, and then adding oil and vinegar.

Is there a way to keep strawberries red and bright in color when they are to be cooked? My attempts at preserving result in dark red colored fruit.

In preserving strawberries where long cooking is necessary, add about 1 teaspoon of vinegar to 1 pint of berries at the beginning of the cooking process and you should find that the berries keep both red and plump. Over cooking will dull and darken the color. Short cooking is an advantage and storing in a dark place also helps to retain color.

Will you please give me a recipe for Boston Cream Pie?

Boston Cream Pie is a year-round favorite. Use these ingredients:

Boston Cream Pie

- 1/2 C. butter
- 1 C. sugar
- 2 eggs

- 2 1/2 tsp. baking powder
- 1 tsp. vanilla

Beat butter to a creamy consistency, add sugar, then eggs beaten until light. Then add milk and flour to which baking powder has been added. Bake in two layers in a 450 degree oven for about 25 minutes. Put layers together with a cream filling, made as follows:

Cream Filling

- 1 C. milk

Huey Long in Strategic Retreat, Awaiting Opportunity to Return

WASHINGTON—No one has sunk into greater eclipse lately than that ebullient, ranting, debonair individual, Huey P. Long.

After staggering, weak-kneed and bleary, from the Senate floor after his futile filibuster, Huey has almost disappeared from the headlines which he so loves to adorn.

There are several reasons for this, some not so complimentary to the alleged Kingfish.

One is that Huey has not been as faithful a traveler on the water-wagon as during the heyday of his rampage last winter. When he is on it he can talk and walk rings around most of his Senatorial colleagues. When he is off, his effectiveness is nil.

Another reason is that Roosevelt, with his high tax program, stole Huey's best thunder.

Then there is the effect of certain rookie Senators who decided to call the Kingfish's bluff. They resorted to the simple expedient of sitting in the last row of the Senate and emitting "Boo"s.

Even for a man with Huey's hide, it was downright disheartening.

So the Kingfish, who is as good a strategist as they make 'em, decided to fade out of the picture. He has done this before. His policy is that of any good general: When the battle is too hot, retreat, wait for the proper moment, then come back.

A lot of people, of course, claim Huey can't come back. But to one who came back after the Sands Point, L. I., washroom episode, no "come-back" is impossible.

Gold Diviner

La Luz Mining Company has just been restrained from selling its stock. In doing this the Securities-Exchange Commission staged an unusual demonstration.

The demonstration was to test the accuracy of a gold-divining instrument by which the company located its gold.

The La Luz Company claimed to have a vein of ore which would mine $30 a ton—exceptionally high content. In substantiation of this it cited the word of Professor Philip Haas of Los Angeles, described as a "scientist and geologist with a world-wide reputation as inventor of the mineral indicator."

But the SEC was skeptical. It wanted to know how Professor Haas and his mineral indicator could locate gold. So it asked the Professor to come to Washington. There members of the Commission arranged a test.

Six large match boxes were arranged on the floor. One box contained a gold nugget worth about $200. Professor Haas was asked to locate the match box which held gold.

He applied himself with great earnestness. The mineral indicator was held in the right hand. It consisted chiefly of a weight suspended from a brass cylinder. If the weight swayed from side to side it denoted the presence of gold.

One by one, Professor Haas held the indicator over the boxes. Over the second box, the indicator swayed. "This box," he said, "contains gold."

Over the fifth box he hesitated, the instrument swayed almost imperceptibly. Finally Haas said: "This box also contains gold."

"Then the second and fifth boxes contain gold," summarized Andrew Jackson, attorney for the SEC.

Professor Haas hesitated, decided to test the fifth box over again. He repeated the test, declared that this box did not contain gold.

Then the boxes were opened. The second box contained a piece

SPECIAL MEET OF SOLONS TO BE SHORT ONE

Davey Wants a "Short and Snappy" Special Session Claim

MAY LAST WEEK

No Other Bills But Taxation to be Considered

COLUMBUS, O., July 17.—Gov. Martin L. Davey and his legislative advisers intend to make the special session of the state legislature next September "short and snappy," it was disclosed today.

The governor has spread the word among his trusted legislative leaders that the special session is to end in one week after the general assembly reconvenes if possible and that it is not to be made another bill-introducing orgy.

The special session will be the last of his administration, his advisers let it be known, although there were a great many other members of the assembly today who were willing to gamble that the general assembly will be back in session many months before the end of 1936 to untangle difficult taxation, school and relief problems.

To Last Week

Davey, according to Representative Grover Traxler (D), of Wyandot county, one of his administration supporters in the house, intends to use his influence to see that the general assembly does not stay in session more than one week this fall.

"He does not expect to call, at all, other special session during the biennium," Traxler told members of the special joint legislative schools committee.

From J. Freer Bittinger, Ashland, speaker of the House of Representatives, came word that administration leaders hope to steer clear of a mass of new legislation at the special session, although there are a half dozen special committees busy drafting plans for additional legislation for the session.

Only Tax Bills

R. J. Kiefer (R), Logan county representative, cautioned members of the joint schools committee against preparing new legislation to attempt to solve the state's educational ills, pointing out that Bittinger had indicated it is the purpose of the special session to wrestle with taxation matters solely.

RAIL RATES FOUND HIGH

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Examiners of the Interstate Commerce Commission today recommended it hold that the regular basic passenger-fare structure by railroads throughout the country of .6 cents per mile is unreasonable and that a 2-cent rate in coaches and 3 cents in Pullman cars should be prescribed.

They also recommended it find the Pullman surcharge is unreasonable and should be eliminated. However, extra fares as now charged for extraordinary and supplemental or alternative Pullman service have not been shown to be unreasonable or otherwise unlawful, the examiners said.

15 INJURED AS TRAIN HITS SMALL TRUCK

Upper Sandusky Scene of Crash of Pennsylvania Flyer Today

ENGINEER, SERIOUS

Rails Torn Up for 600 Feet by Speeding Train

UPPER SANDUSKY, July 17.—Fifteen persons were injured, three seriously, when the Pennsylvania railroad's Liberty Limited, westbound from Pittsburgh to Chicago, crashed into the trailer of a small truck at a downtown grade crossing here at 5:15 a. m. today.

The seriously injured: Engineer R. D. Todd, 47, Ft. Wayne, entire right side scalded, right arm broken, shoulder dislocated, deep cut back of right ear. Taken to Ft. Wayne.

Fireman J. W. Ritchie, Ft. Wayne, 48, face scalded, legs cut and bruised. Taken to Ft. Wayne.

Robert Williams, 25, Cambridge, O., driver of the truck. Ribs broken, cuts and bruises. Taken to Bucyrus, O., hospital.

12 Others Hurt

The twelve other injured persons were all passengers in the 10-coach crack train. None was seriously hurt and only a few required medical treatment. None went to a hospital.

Upper Sandusky is on the Main line of the Ft. Wayne division. There is a double track running through town. An eastbound passenger train had just cleared the crossing, when Williams put his truck in gear, unaware of the approach of the Liberty Limited.

Demolishing the trailer, the giant engine lunged from the rails, tearing them up for 600 feet as it went. The locomotive, after careening crazily, finally keeled over on its side right angles to what was left of the double track.

Tore Away Platform

In leaving the track, the locomotive became uncoupled from the string of coaches, which dashed on past it for a long distance, then tore off the platform from the Pennsylvania railroad freight depot, finally halted within 10 feet of the front porch of Virgil Fox, who with his family was asleep in the house.

The wreck tied up all traffic through here on the Ft. Wayne division. Railroad workers said the track probably will not be restored until late today. Meanwhile, trains were rerouted via Marion.

SHERIFF GETS LETTER SENT STEVE SURINA

"We'll Spring You or be There With You" Message Says to One

SIGNED "BOSS"

County Jail Watched Closely by Guards

A close watch was being maintained over the county jail today by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and deputies following receipt of a code message addressed to one of the four Allentown, Pa. youths captured here Sunday.

The message, addressed to Steve Surina, one of the confessed murderers, was mailed from Columbus at 8 p. m. Monday and said in part: "We will spring you or be in there with you."

Two state highway patrolmen and members of the sheriff's force took special precautions to guard the jail Tuesday afternoon and night.

The message read as follows: "Dear Steve: Don't worry old pal we will stand by you. I am sending you an attorney in a few days. (Signed) Boss."

Written in code was this message: "Keep your chin up and your clothes on. We will spring you or be in there with you."

The code consisted of the use of numbers, each number representing a letter in the alphabet, running from Z to A instead of the usual A to Z.

Surina Denies It

When Surina was shown the message, he said it was "just a prank." After an investigation, however, Sheriff Radcliff learned that the code was the same one used by Surina and his pals while they were serving terms in a Pennsylvania reformatory.

The sheriff also learned that the leader of the gang was a man named "Boss" and was called "Boss" for short. He is believed to be the writer of the message.

Sheriff Radcliff took the note seriously enough to have the jail watched closely. It is under special guard today.

The sheriff has heard reports from several quarters that a strange youth has been in the city since Sunday night. He has appeared at several places and acted suspiciously. It is possible, the sheriff believes, that this person is a member of the gang.

Warrants Received

Warrants for the return of the four hoodlums were received by Sheriff Radcliff Tuesday. Nick Rishko the self-styled leader of the quartet, is charged with murdering Joseph Rathburn, a night watchman in an Allentown junkyard on November 9, 1934. Surina has already confessed a part in the murder.

A warrant charging that all four of the youths, Surina, Rishko, Frank Stavinsky, and Sveve Schutz stole a Chevrolet sedan valued at $700 from Allentown on June 28 and was also received. Sheriff Radcliff intends to hold the quartet until he receives word from Police Chief Fred Kundt of Columbus that Detective George Ruel, who was shot in the search Sunday, is on the way to recovery.

Minister Who Married Chinese President's Son Kicks About Fee of $5

ASHLAND, Ky., July 17.—The son of the president of China, K. M. James Lin, was married here Sunday to Miss Viola Brown, clerk in a Columbus, O., five-and-ten-cent store, Justice of the Peace Gordon Ireson, who said he performed the ceremony, disclosed today.

Lin is a student at Ohio State University and 26 years old. The bride is the daughter of Louis Brown and is 24.

Justice Ireson told International News Service the young couple went to his office alone Sunday and told him they wanted to get married.

He took them to the county clerk, W. E. Fleming, who issued a license at once. They returned to Ireson's home and he performed the ceremony.

"Both Lin and his bride were unusually calm, I thought," said Justice Ireson.

"They brought no witnesses with them, so we used a couple of local men, A. A. Klaiman and I. Nelson."

"The ceremony didn't bring me much of a fee considering the prominence of the young man."

Pressed for the exact amount, Justice Ireson finally admitted it was $5.

"But I didn't pay that much when I got married," he added good naturedly.

REQUEST FOR GRANT FILED

Scioto-Sandusky Project Leaders Ask $34,000,000 For Federal Project.

Formal application for a work's relief grant of $34,000,000 for the Scioto-Sandusky conservancy project of which Pickaway-co is a part, has been filed in Washington.

W. E. Martin of Upper Sandusky and Louis Adams, Columbus, president and counsel, respectively, of the conservancy board, who conferred with Washington officials expressed gratification over the progress made and hope for favorable consideration.

Because it is estimated that the annual average expenditure per man per year employed on the project would exceed $1,500 instead of $1,140, the limit previously fixed by the president, it was necessary to file at the White House a request for an executive order by the president exempting the project from the general rule.

In order to bring the Scioto-Sandusky project more nearly within the limits of the president's suggestions, F. E. R. A. officials suggest that numerous low cost projects in territory adjacent to or included in the conservancy district be included in the application, thus reducing the average cost per man.

Poor System of Offices and Floor Space in State Government Sherrill Says.

The report recommended that a number of glass partitions be removed in the interests of economy and further urged that "better grouping of various departments could be made to produce greater efficiency and better supervision."

Floor space and layout recommendations, the report said, can be carried out by executive action. The Sherrill group did not specify in its report how much money could be saved the state by better use of floor space, but it was estimated that total savings would run into the thousands yearly.

RELIEF WORKER MAKES CHARGES

POMEROY, O., July 17.—A former Meigs-co county relief worker today tossed a bombshell into the relief hearing being conducted here by the joint legislative relief investigating committee when she charged that "liquor parties" were a common thing in relief offices here.

The witness, Mrs. Lelah Flint, discharged several months ago, told the committee liquor was kept under tables and desks in offices here.

She charged that on several occasions relief clients seeking aid from Henry Corradini, former Meigs county director, now relief head in Lawrence county, were forced to wait "long periods of time because Corradini was not in condition to meet them."

America has never really been written about. There is so much for American writers yet to do. Honestly, in the next 20 years we are going to turn out some grand books. Thomas Wolfe, American author.

Uncle Shylock

The Home Owners Loan Corporation is now free to face with the question of whether the Government is going to play Uncle Shylock or Santa Claus.

It has quit making loans and has settled down exclusively to the job of getting its money back. It is merely a collecting agency.

This involves a most important policy—one which goes to the root of the New Deal. Millions of dollars have been lent by various New Deal agencies, and the general assumption by many people is that the Government never will try very hard to get its money back.

This was the case with the HOLC. Much of the money lent to home owners admittedly was a poor risk. The Government took up mortgages which private companies turned down. That was the chief reason for its creation.

As a result, the number of HOLC delinquents is piling up rapidly. At present twenty per cent of all HOLC borrowers are delinquent ninety days or more.

It is significant that the HOLC is using persistent—some people claim, hard-boiled—collection methods. With the exception of cases in genuine distress, officials are ringing doorbells daily and demanding cash.

The policy is to dispel the notion that Uncle Sam is a benign charity giver in the mortgage business. He is to be Uncle Shylock.

It looks as if this is a definite standard for another New Deal money-lending agencies.

HE MADE AND LOST FORTUNES

ANDRE GUSTAVE CITROEN, French automobile manufacturer, was a member of that school of industrial geniuses who owe both success and failure to their daring. He was frankly a disciple of Henry Ford and copied both the producing and the marketing methods that brought such notable success to his American contemporary. And Citroen was successful, too. His industrial achievements were the wonder of Europe and his abilities were not confined alone to the swift production of good automobiles.

During the war, when the failure of the ammunition supply was responsible for serious military reverses for France, Citroen transferred his plants into munitions works and soon was turning out 55,000 shells a day. He lacked, however, what Ford possesses in great abundance—discretion and caution—and these defects proved to be the factors that contributed to ultimate failure, rather than success. Great adventures and fantastic enterprises lured him.

He financed two expeditions across the Sahara in Citroen cars. He envisioned vast hotels in the middle of the desert and an automobile route from Algiers to equatorial South Africa. At the Deauville Casino he was a familiar figure. Once he won 15,000,000 francs in a single week at baccarat. Another time he lost 13,000,000 francs at poker in a single night. When death came to him a few days ago all that he had gained through daring and energy and genius had been stripped him by adversity. But he had done much for his country and had lived an exciting life.

THE LASH

BRUTAL and a relic of coarser days perhaps, the whipping post still commands whole-hearted respect from malefactors. Bearing this out is the instance of a man in Alexandria, Virginia, convicted of flogging a child, who preferred a year in jail to a taste of the same punishment.

Physical pain is something that impresses even the dullest. Crooks of a certain class know nothing of the finer points of penology, nor do they appreciate society's sincere endeavors to reform them. Instead of recognizing a parole as an opportunity to go straight, they are liable to glory in their astuteness in having political friends to do smart wire-pulling in their behalf. But the lash descending on the bare hide sings a song they can understand.

The whip makes no appeal to hidden virtues, it exerts no kindly suggestion to repentance, but it is a sure and effective means of implanting the fear of law in hearts of the yellow rats who prey so impudently upon their brethren. It is retribution, and retribution hurts.

BRITISH HUMOR

LONDON PUNCH has always found America and Americans unfailing sources of humor. Our manners and customs have provided material for many a merry squib. Punch's writers and caricaturists have found it necessary merely to give the American scene a casual survey and the material for uproarious laughter, or at least for subdued mirth, was immediately available.

One of Punch's writers, a shrewd chap who knows us inside and out to whom all of our weaknesses and foibles are as an opera book, has just written a piece on Americans and their ways. "I like a grateful nature as well as anybody," he says. "Moreover, nobody knows better than I do what the Americans have done for this country—crooners, jazz and the English language what it is today. O. K. by me, boy."

This is a severe indictment and we stand convicted. But it is incomplete. There is no mention of a foolish loan of five billion dollars which the United States made to England when all seemed lost, and there is no word of a couple of million Americans sent to France when England's back, on no less an authority than the head of her armies, was to the wall and when every inch of ground gained in four years of fighting had been lost.

These circumstances assume aspects of humor only when considered in connection with the fact that England, when we sought to collect an honest debt, told us to go jump in the creek. Does not the writer for Punch recognize its possibilities for a rib-splitting column or two?

Fable: Once a perfectly grand boy asked a girl for a date and she turned him down because she already had a date with a pill.

STORMY LOVE

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE BELLE BURNS GROMER

CHAPTER 56
WORSE THINGS than a wounded ego could happen to a woman—and to a man. Within himself Val must find the strength for both of them. He crossed to his wife and took hold of her limp hands. "You must trust me, Lia," he said earnestly. "I'll take care of you from now on. I promise. You need never fear that anyone will laugh at you. But we must get going to run away. Right here we stay. With our heads held high, see?" His mouth was grim when he forced himself to say, "Why, this is no great tragedy—that has happened to us. We have something really lasting and fine ahead if we fight to make it so. But I'm not getting out of the navy. And I'm not selling my invention. Hereafter, I do not run away from anybody nor anything! Do you understand?"

She stared up at him, her face expressionless. "You—won't change your mind?"
Her fringed lids lowered abruptly. "Very well," she said. "I'll rest now as you wished. Perhaps I shall even sleep if I am not disturbed."
It hurt Lia the devil to hear that hopeless note in her voice. He watched the small doll-like figure in its gaudy crimson robe go dejectedly back into the shadows of the room beyond. The door swung to behind her.

He went back to the desk with a new determination in his movements. "The end is in the circle of light. No need for further delay in placing these plans where they belonged. He leaned forward and scrawled Captain Edding's name across the packet in bold letters. After that he picked it up and went out the door and along the hallway. As he passed he could hear Stephen Garenne moving nervously about in the living room.

Garenne must wait a little longer to tell his story, Val thought. He emerged from the bungalow and heard "four bells" striking in different tones from the various ships in the yard. Six o'clock, and already almost dark. He peered up to where black clouds scudded across ominously darkening skies. A hot wind, acrid with forest fire smoke had sprung up from the southeast. A storm was on its way.

He crossed to the office and was glad to see that the door was still there. Without more ado he gave the manila envelope into the man's broad hands. Then he stood with a great feeling of relief to watch the awkward figure with its sea-going gait roll off in the direction of Captain Edding's quarters.

Val returned to the house and paused in the kitchen to tell the sly-eyed Opal she was to leave for the night. Mrs. Preston was not well, he informed her, and wanted to sleep. He would prepare something for both of them when they wished it. Meanwhile, Opal was to go to bed. Understand, at once! He did not avoid her curious, knowing stare, but rather returned it until she hastily lowered her pale eyes. He waited until she had donned her hat and coat and reluctantly closed the outer door behind herself. Then he went on through the hall to the living room where Stephen Garenne waited.

"Now then, sir, I am ready for your explanation," Val said from the doorway.

The tall, lean figure standing before the fireplace swung about to face him. "Certainly, Preston, one is due you," Garenne admitted with a shake of his head.

As the older man spoke, Val had started across the floor only to be stopped by a noise that seemed to come from the bedroom. He turned up a swift hand for silence. "Did you hear that?" he asked Garenne sharply and made for the closed door.

"For God's sake let the girl stay where she is!" Garenne cried. "It was only the wind you heard. Don't arouse her again. I beg of you. She had about all I can stand for this."

Val leaned his ear against the panel but heard no further sound. Lia's strength had been heavily taxed and perhaps it was well not to disturb her. But even as he turned away he was goaded by a sense of something amiss, an urge to go back and enter the room.

Garenne's harsh voice diverted him, however. "Believe me, my boy," Garenne said, his dark, hawk-like face intense with feeling. "It was never my intention that such an injustice should be perpetrated on an unsuspecting man." He began to pace the floor, his hands clasped behind him, head bent. "As soon as the news of this ill-starred marriage reached me I made plans to come here with all speed. I wanted to get things right," he waved an arm in a gesture of bewilderment, "but how, beyond me!"

"When I arrived in Bremenport," he went on, "I saw that you were kind to Lia, that you seemed genuinely fond of her. After that, I was in a curs in a New York theatre, where a criminal lurked in hiding for his victim."

Val returned to the house and paused in the kitchen to tell the sly-eyed Opal she was to leave for the night. Mrs. Preston was not well, he informed her, and wanted to sleep. SHREWD REASONING
EVERY EXPERT has the rare faculty of mentally visualizing holdings about the card table. Lacking this faculty a player may be classed as "good," but he never belongs in the class of "experts." The following hand illustrates the great utility of this faculty. The hero of the occasion was my sister, Howard Cornwell, who sat South.

Bidding went: West, 1-Club; North, 2-Hearts, to show game prospects; East, 2-Spades, rather than at once supporting partner; West, 3-Clubs, to show both length and strength; North, 3-Hearts; East, 4-Clubs; West, 4-Spades; North, 5-Diamonds, causing East to pass. Cornwell studied the bidding. Evidently I held 6 good hearts. West held the missing high hearts or East would have doubled. I had no fewer than 5 diamonds, and not more than 2 black cards. Although we were vulnerable and opponents were not, the vulnerable our chances to go game caused Cornwell to bid to 5-Hearts.

for the added 50 points score, which might increase our rubber score 100 points.
The opening lead was the 2 of clubs. Dummy played low. West's 9 won the trick. Of course West knew that I held no more clubs, but he led his K of clubs just the same, after he had carefully taken his 4 of spades. North ruffed the second club lead.
Dummy's K of diamonds afforded entry to the tabled hand. The 5 of hearts was led through West, who had to play the J. Declarer's Q won the trick. East played the 2. There were two important questions for North to consider: Did the J of trumps on the first trick mean that West held the lone K? Were the Q-J of diamonds divided between opponents or held in one hand. The odds against guessing both answers correctly were 3 to 1. There appeared to be no chance in West's play of the J of trumps in the first lead if he held 3 hearts, but it was possible that he did it to make me lay down my Ace, instead of coming through him again. Regardless of how trumps were held I could not fulfill my contract if one opponent held both the Q and J of diamonds.
No reasoning could inform me surely how opposing cards were held. I had to guess what to do. I knew only that West held the missing K of trumps. I guessed that the K was unguarded, so I led my Ace of hearts, picked up the K, then led my 10 and picked up the 9 of hearts. Diamonds also were in my hand. I was to be thankful to my partner's agility we fulfilled our contract and won 100 more than the rubber would have scored at 5-Diamonds.

Carbon Dioxide Used As Relief for Asthma

By LOGAN CLENDENING
IN VISITING the hospital during the last two weeks I was impressed with the treatment of conditions of the nose by carbon dioxide. This is a new treatment and appears to afford symptomatic relief.

At Guy's hospital, where I saw the demonstration, the physician himself is a sufferer from asthma and a moderately rapid stream of gas is allowed to flow into the nose without being actually inhaled. In hay fever and that constant runny condition of the nose, called chronic rhinitis, the treatment should be given for five to ten minutes up each nostril, morning and evening. Bouncing the nose with ordinary charged water should have much the same effect.
The effect seems to be a direct one on the mucous membrane of the nose. In asthma, it taken early in an attack, it may prevent the development of stertorous breathing.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clending can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are "Indigestion and Constipation," "Itching and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

But he obtained much more relief from another treatment, which consisted of a nasal douche with the Mont Dore water. This consists, so he says, of 99 per cent carbon dioxide.

Slight Tingling Produced
It produces a slight tingling sensation in the nose, and occasionally a burning feeling at the top of the

ANNUAL RED BIRD SCHOOL

AUGUST 1-10

Trautman Says Players 17 Years of Age or Over Eligible to Attend.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 17. The annual Columbus Red Bird baseball school will be held this year at the Red Bird Stadium from August 1 to August 10. President George M. Trautman has announced. The school is open to players 17 years of age or over who are seeking a chance to break into professional ball.

Each year, hundreds of youngsters who believe in their skill try out at the Red Bird school and the other schools operated by the St. Louis Cardinal organization over the country. The entire Cardinal scouting staff is on hand to supervise the operation of each school and each player is given ample opportunity to prove his worth.

Any player meeting the age requirement is requested by President Trautman to write or call at the Red Bird Stadium for an application blank. He must secure for his application, the endorsement of his coach or manager or some person in a position to judge his playing ability. Applicants that are accepted are to be notified by mail and will report August 1 at 9 a. m. for the ten-day school. Players offered contracts at the conclusion of the school are refunded their expenses.

About THIS and THAT

By the Second Guesser

Really Loves Game

If everyone played golf and loved the game like Frank A. Marion, Jr., then Circleville would soon have golfers good enough to compete with any amateurs in the state. Marion is playing his first year at one of the finest outdoor sports in existence. He works for the gas company and has so much every day to do.

Works and Then Plays

His system is simple. He does his work, and then, and then he goes to the golf course to get in his nine, 12 or 15 holes every day. Every day, mind you, not once a week but seven times a week. His work is even benefitted probably by his zeal for the golf game for he is just as enthusiastic over the links he gets in for George Foerster and company as he is over a 250-yard drive.

Marion Good Prospect

Right now Marion is the best member-prospect of the club has had in a long while. Johnny Mader is not shooting the kind of scores he did when he was caddy and a member of the high school golf team. John Jenkins is playing the best game on the course but he is a caddy and not eligible to play as a club member. "Would be a good idea if some sportsmanlike member would buy him a junior membership. He could play the No. 1 spot on the club's team in its inter-club matches."

OILS LOSE TO SPECIALS

Colored Teams Run Roughshod Over Circleville Oil Team Tuesday.

The Jones Specials, with Bob Jones heading them, ran roughshod over the Circleville Oils Tuesday night. The score was 12-3.

The Specials were rather hot from the beginning and pounded the Oils' two pitchers, Bob Maloney and Joe Barnes for a great number of hits.

Tonight the Pickaway Dairy and Parma Chows teams meet.

BIRDS WIN AGAIN

COLUMBUS, July 17. American Association fans today were wondering who was going to stop the Columbus Red Birds in their march toward the Association top.

The Birds, continuing to show the brilliance which has characterized their play during the past three weeks, annexed their tenth straight victory last night by defeating St. Paul, 5 to 1.

Jim Winford bested Monte Stratton, one of the league's leading hurlers, to keep the Bird slate clean. The Birds clinched the game with a three-run rally in the sixth.

OLONS HEAR PROTESTS TO SALES TAXES

Hundreds of Letters Received Urging Substitute for Present Measure.

COLUMBUS, July 17.—Despite estimates that the state of Ohio will need between 30 or 40 million dollars in additional revenue next year, a movement to prevent re-enactment of the sales tax law is growing stronger daily.

Members of the joint legislative committee working on a taxation program to present to the special session of the General Assembly in the fall, are being flooded with letters urging that a substitute for the sales tax law be found.

The present sales levy expires Dec. 31, 1935. It is estimated that it will bring in approximately $50,000,000 in revenue to the state. Thus far, for 24 weeks, the sales tax has brought in over $22,500,000, not deducting the cost of administration. Carlton Dargusch, vice-chairman of the state tax commission, estimates that total yield will be $54,000,000.

No Substitute Proposed

No substitute proposal for such a large revenue yielding law has been proposed specifically, but the opposition to the sales tax is definite and growing. Observers are agreed that if the law is re-enacted, amendments to exempt food, clothing and building materials are almost certain.

If these amendments are adopted, it will mean a loss in revenue of approximately $10,000,000.

Marian Martin Pattern

Marian Martin Sew Chart Complete, Diagrammed Included.

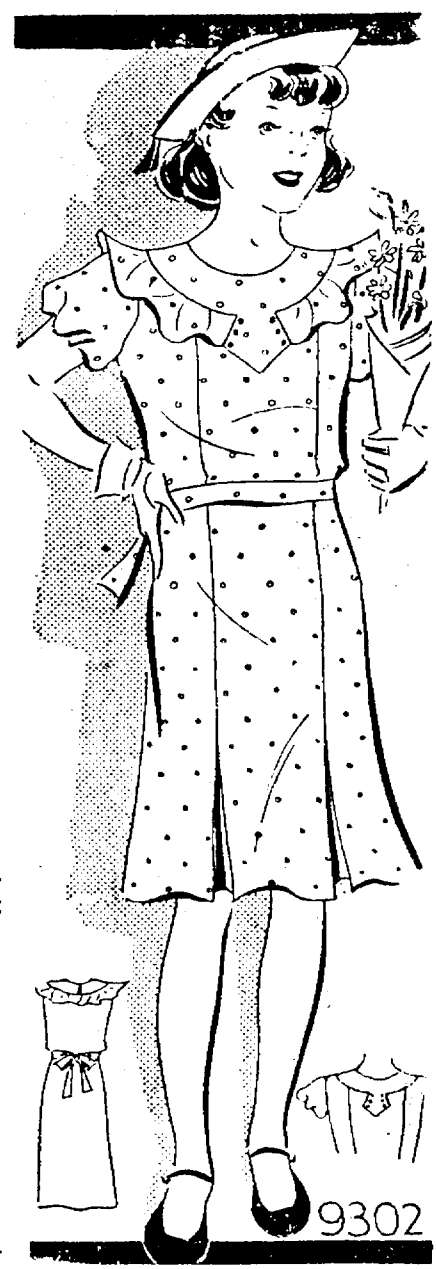

PATTERN 9302

Take a second look at this sketch for there's more to it than appears at first! A glance convinces one it's exactly the kind of frock Mother and Daughter approve of—but a second look proves that fetching little puffed sleeve can be omitted if it's a cool frock you're after. The fly-away ruffle encircling the shoulders is lovely if the dress is of crisp fabric like Swiss or dimity. For a sturdy play dress, the small sketch illustrates tailored perfection achieved without the ruffle. This frock is all things to all girls—just choose the fabric and run it up in no time. Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart included.

Pattern 9302 may be ordered only in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14. Size 10 requires 2 3/4 yards 36 inch fabric.
